769 Phil. 861

FIRST DIVISION

[G.R. No. 212920, September 16, 2015]

COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE, PETITIONER, VS. NIPPON EXPRESS (PHILS.) CORPORATION, RESPONDENT.

D E C I S I O N

PERLAS-BERNABE, J.:

Assailed in this petition for review on certiorari[1] are the Decision[2] dated December 18, 2013 and the Resolution[3] dated June 10, 2014 of the Court of Tax Appeals (CTA) En Banc in CTA EB No. 924, which affirmed the Resolution[4] dated July 31, 2012 of the CTA Third Division (CTA Division) in CTA Case No. 6967, granting respondent Nippon Express (Phils.) Corporation's (Nippon) motion to withdraw petition for review[5] (motion to withdraw).

The Facts

Nippon is a domestic corporation duly organized and existing under Philippine laws which is primarily engaged in the business of freight forwarding, namely, in the international and domestic air and sea freight and cargo forwarding, hauling, carrying, handling, distributing, loading, and unloading general cargoes and all classes of goods, wares, and merchandise, and the operation of container depots, warehousing, storage, hauling, and packing facilities.[6] It is a Value-Added Tax (VAT) registered entity with Tax Identification No. VAT Registration No. 004-669-434-000.[7] As such, it filed its quarterly VAT returns for the year 2002 on April 25, 2002, July 25, 2002, October 25, 2002, and January 27, 2003, respectively.[8] It maintained that during the said period it incurred input VAT attributable to its zero-rated sales in the amount of P28,405,167.60, from which only P3,760,660.74 was applied as tax credit, thus, reflecting refundable excess input VAT in the amount of P24,644,506.86.[9]

On April 22, 2004, Nippon filed an administrative claim for refund[10] of its unutilized input VAT in the amount of P24,644,506.86 for the year 2002 before the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR).[11] A day later, or on April 23, 2004, it filed a judicial claim for tax refund, by way of petition for review,[12] before the CTA, docketed as CTA Case No. 6967.[13]

For its part, petitioner the Commissioner of Internal Revenue (CIR) asserted, inter alia, that the amounts being claimed by Nippon as unutilized input VAT were not properly documented, hence, should be denied.[14]

Proceedings Before the CTA Division

In a Decision[15] dated August 10, 2011, the CTA Division partially granted Nippon's claim for tax refund, and thereby ordered the CIR to issue a tax credit certificate in the reduced amount of P2,614,296.84, representing its unutilized input VAT which was attributable to its zero-rated sales.[16] It found that while Nippon timely filed its administrative and judicial claims within the two (2)-year prescriptive period,[17] it, however, failed to show that the recipients of its services - which, in this case, were mostly Philippine Economic Zone Authority registered enterprises - were non-residents "doing business outside the Philippines." Accordingly, it concluded that Nippon's purported sales therefrom could not qualify as zero-rated sales, hence, the reduction in the amount of tax credit certificate claimed.[18]

Before its receipt of the August 10, 2011 Decision, or on August 12, 2011, Nippon filed a motion to withdraw,[19] considering that the BIR, acting on its administrative claim, already issued a tax credit certificate in the amount of P21,675,128.91 on July 27, 2011 (July 27, 2011 Tax Credit Certificate).

Separately, the CIR moved for reconsideration[20] of the August 10, 2011 Decision and filed its comment/opposition[21] to Nippon's motion to withdraw, claiming that: (a) the CTA Division had already resolved the factual issue pertaining to Nippon's entitlement to a tax credit certificate, which, after trial, was proven to be only in the amount of P2,614,296.84; (b) the issuance of the July 27, 2011 Tax Credit Certificate was bereft of factual and legal bases, and prejudicial to the interest of the government; and (c) Nippon's motion to withdraw was "tantamount to [a] withdrawal and abandonment of its [mjotion for [reconsideration also filed in this case."[22]

Thereafter, Nippon, which maintained that it only had notice of the August 10, 2011 Decision on August 16, 2011,[23] likewise sought for reconsideration,[24] praying that the CTA Division set aside its August 10, 2011 Decision and render judgment ordering the CIR to issue a tax credit certificate in the full amount of P24,644,506.86, or in the alternative, grant its motion to withdraw.[25]

In a Resolution dated July 31, 2012,[26] the CTA Division granted Nippon's motion to withdraw and, thus, considered the case closed and terminated.[27] It found that pursuant to Revenue Memorandum Circular No. 49-03 (RMC No. 49-03) dated August 15, 2003, Nippon correctly availed of the proper remedy notwithstanding the promulgation of the August 10, 2011 Decision. It added that in approving the withdrawal of Nippon's petition for review, it exercised its discretionary authority under Section 3, Rule 50 of the Rules of Court after due consideration of the reasons proffered by Nippon, namely: (a) that the parties had already arrived at a reasonable settlement of the issues; (b) further legal and related costs would be avoided; and (c) the court's time and resources would be saved.[28]

Aggrieved, the CIR elevated[29] its case to the CTA En Banc.

The CTA En Banc Ruling

In a Decision[30] dated December 18, 2013, the CTA En Banc affirmed the July 31, 2012 Resolution of the CTA Division granting Nippon's motion to withdraw.[31] It debunked the CIR's assertions that Nippon failed to comply with the requirements set forth in RMC No. 49-03 - i.e., that Nippon failed to notify the BIR that it agreed with its findings and to file the necessary motion before the CTA Division prior to the promulgation of its Decision -noting that RMC No. 49-03 did not expressly require a taxpayer to inform the BIR of its assent nor prescribe a definite period for filing a motion to withdraw. It also observed that the CIR did not deny the existence and issuance of the July 27, 2011 Tax Credit Certificate. In this regard, the same may be taken judicial notice of, and the need for its formal offer dispensed with.[32]

The CIR moved for partial reconsideration[33] which was, however, denied by the CTA En Banc in a Resolution[34] dated June 10, 2014; hence, this petition.

The Issue Before the Court

The core issue in this case is whether the CTA properly granted Nippon's motion to withdraw.

The Court's Ruling

The petition is meritorious.

A perusal of the Revised Rules of the Court of Tax Appeals[35] (RRCTA) reveals the lack of provisions governing the procedure for the withdrawal of pending appeals before the CTA. Hence, pursuant to Section 3, Rule 1 of the RRCTA, the Rules of Court shall suppletorily apply:

> Sec. 3. Applicability of the Rules of Court. - The Rules of Court in the Philippines shall apply suppletorily to these Rules.

Rule 50 of the Rules of Court - an adjunct rule to the appellate procedure in the CA under Rules 42, 43, 44, and 46 of the Rules of Court which are equally adopted in the RRCTA[36] - states that when the case is deemed submitted for resolution, withdrawal of appeals made after the filing of the appellee's brief may still be allowed in the discretion of the court:

> RULE 50
> DISMISSAL OF APPEAL
> x x x x
> Section 3. Withdrawal of appeal. — An appeal may be withdrawn as of right at any time before the filing of the appellee's brief. Thereafter, the withdrawal may be allowed in the discretion of the court. (Emphasis supplied)

Impelled by the BIR's supervening issuance of the July 27, 2011 Tax Credit Certificate, Nippon filed a motion to withdraw the case, proffering that:

> Having arrived at a reasonable settlement of the issues with the [CIR]/BIR, and to avoid incurring further legal and related costs, not to mention the time and resources of [the CTA], [Nippon] most respectfully moves for the withdrawal of its Petition for Review.[37]

Finding the aforementioned grounds to be justified, the CTA Division allowed the withdrawal of Nippon's appeal thereby ordering the case closed and terminated, notwithstanding the fact that the said motion was filed after the promulgation of its August 10, 2011 Decision.

While it is true that the CTA Division has the prerogative to grant a motion to withdraw under the authority of the foregoing legal provisions, the attendant circumstances in this case should have incited it to act otherwise.

First, it should be pointed out that the August 10, 2011 Decision was rendered by the CTA Division after a full-blown hearing in which the parties had already ventilated their claims. Thus, the findings contained therein were the results of an exhaustive study of the pleadings and a judicious evaluation of the evidence submitted by the parties, as well as the report of the commissioned certified public accountant. In Reyes v. Commission on Elections,[38] the Court only noted, and did not grant, a motion to withdraw the petition filed after it had already acted on said petition, ratiocinating in the following wise:

> It may well be in order to remind petitioner that jurisdiction, once acquired, is not lost upon the instance of the parties, but continues until the case is terminated. When petitioner filed her Petition for Certiorari jurisdiction vested in the Court and, in fact, the Court exercised such jurisdiction when it acted on the petition. Such jurisdiction cannot be lost by the unilateral withdrawal of the petition by petitioner.[39]

The primary reason, however, that militates against the granting of the motion to withdraw is the fact that the CTA Division, in its August 10, 2011 Decision, had already determined that Nippon was only entitled to refund the reduced amount of P2,614,296.84 since it failed to prove that the recipients of its services were non-residents "doing business outside the Philippines"; hence, Nippon's purported sales therefrom could not qualify as zero-rated sales, necessitating the reduction in the amount of refund claimed. Markedly different from this is the BIR's determination that Nippon should receive P21,675,128.91 as per the July 27, 2011 Tax Credit Certificate, which is, in all, P19,060,832.07 larger than the amount found due by the CTA Division. Therefore, as aptly pointed out by Associate Justice Teresita J. Leonardo-De Castro during the deliberations on this case, the massive discrepancy alone between the administrative and judicial determinations of the amount to be refunded to Nippon should have already raised a red flag to the CTA Division. Clearly, the interest of the government, and, more significantly, the public, will be greatly prejudiced by the erroneous grant of refund - at a substantial amount at that - in favor of Nippon. Hence, under these circumstances, the CTA Division should not have granted the motion to withdraw.

In this relation, it deserves mentioning that the CIR is not estopped from assailing the validity of the July 27, 2011 Tax Credit Certificate which was issued by her subordinates in the BIR. In matters of taxation, the government cannot be estopped by the mistakes, errors or omissions of its agents for upon it depends the ability of
