The document is based on frameworks and evidence-based programming findings described in UNFPA Technical Paper No. 3, “Partnering: A New Approach to Sexual and Reproductive Health” (2000) and recent research.

It was prepared by Sylvie I. Cohen, UNFPA Technical Support Division and Michèle Burger, consultant, in collaboration with Akinyele E. Dairo and Wariara Mbugua of UNFPA, New York. It was edited by Janet Jensen and designed by Mary Zehngut.

The following staff shared valuable comments and suggestions: Rodolfo Herrera of UNFPA Peru; Borys Vornick of UNFPA Ukraine; Margaret Thuo, Bina Pradhan and Farah Usmani of the Country Support Teams; Christina Bierring of the Office of Oversight and Evaluation; colleagues in the Technical Support Division, in particular the HIV/AIDS Branch, Maysoon Melek and Jawahir Abdul Jabbar of the Culture, Gender and Human Rights Branch; and Pamela Delargy of the Humanitarian Response Branch, Office of the Executive Director.

summary checklist

for programming partnering with men in reproductive and sexual health

results

does your programme expect to:

INCREASE THE LIKELIHOOD that both men and women will make informed, safe and consensual decisions regarding sexuality and reproduction?

IMPROVE MEN'S ATTITUDES, BELIEFS AND PRACTICES regarding risk-taking?

INCREASE RESPECT FOR HUMAN RIGHTS ENTITLEMENTS that relate to reproductive and sexual health?

ENCOURAGE gender equity and promote freedom from gender-based violence?

ENLIST young men as allies in gender equity and reproductive and sexual health?

ENHANCE the perceived value of the girl child?

MEASUREABLY IMPROVE reproductive health, as evidenced by:

- fewer sexually transmitted infections, including HIV/AIDS?
- greater choice of family planning methods?
- fewer unwanted pregnancies?
- preparedness for safer motherhood?
- a reduction in harmful practices, such as female genital cutting, early marriage and sex-selected abortions?
- less violence, especially violence against women and other intimate partners?
