FOREWORD

Local, regional and national governments are all key actors in the achievement of the global agendas. Their coordination is particularly important in ensuring policies are being aligned as well as effectively implemented at all levels. As the COVID-19 pandemic has made clear at the start of the Decade of Action on the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), we cannot overcome the challenges of poverty, inequality, climate change and conflict alone. Joining efforts towards the implementation of the SDGs and New Urban Agenda (NUA) has become more urgent than ever.

The realisation of the SDGs is directly linked to the capacity of local, regional and national governments to work together. The NUA underlines that governments should partner with each other to seek new solutions to the enormous challenges the world faces today. Such vertical and horizontal cooperation requires clear methodologies and coordination mechanisms.

The capacity of sub-national governments needs to be strengthened to allow them to fulfil their

It is in this context that UN-Habitat and United Cities and Local Governments launch this publication - 'Sub-national Urban Policy: A Guide'. The Guide provides a clear explanation on what sub-national urban policies consist of, why they are important, and how they contribute towards achieving the global agendas. The Guide draws from a range of global examples and issues such as local public service provision, housing, mobility, water and sanitation and climate change, among others. Moreover, the Guide provides a practical set of methodologies, tools and the necessary steps necessary to realize a sub-national urban policy, from its feasibility and formulation phases to implementation, monitoring and evaluation.

UN-Habitat and UCLG have been championing the localization of the global agendas, in particular the SDGs. This Guide is an important milestone and achievement of our partnership. We are convinced that it will be of interest to local, regional, and national policy makers, as well as relevant stakeholders committed to designing
