Foreword

I encourage countries, cities and their citizens to make use of the Guidelines and this Handbook, to harness the power of planned urbanisation towards sustainable social and economic development, and the realisation of the New Urban Agenda and the Sustainable Development Goals.

Maimuna Moh'd Sharif
Executive Director, UN-Habitat

In 2015, the UN-Habitat Governing Council approved the International Guidelines on Urban and Territorial Planning (IG-UTP), a set of universal planning principles for the improvement of planning and management at all levels, from neighbourhood to city level, and beyond, to regional, national and transboundary levels. Urban and territorial planning has been thought of as an exclusive competence of national and local authorities. However, as our cities continue to grow and their stakeholders become increasingly diverse, planning needs to change. The Guidelines advocate for planning as an integrated and participatory decision-making process to plan and manage our cities and territories in a holistic manner.

The IG-UTP are the single most downloaded publication of UN-Habitat. They are also explicitly referenced in the New Urban Agenda. These are testimonies to the gap the Guidelines fill, and the quality of guidance they provide. This Handbook has been designed as an accompanying tool that will assist national governments, local authorities, planning professionals, and civil society organizations in collectively applying the Guidelines to improve planning frameworks and practice at all levels of governance and across the spatial planning continuum. While the Guidelines advocate shared responsibilities and collaborative planning, the Handbook provides a breakdown of the process and elements needed to attain the outcomes, which the Guidelines ultimately aim to achieve.

I encourage countries, cities and their citizens to make use of the Guidelines and this Handbook, to harness the power of planned urbanisation towards sustainable social and economic development, and the realisation of the New Urban Agenda and the Sustainable Development Goals.
