

The Global Crisis and Transformative Social Change

Edited by Peter Utting, Shahra Razavi and Rebecca Varghese Buchholz

'This is an excellent collection which makes a definitive contribution to the growing literature on the financial and economic crisis which engulfed the global economy beginning in 2008. We will find ourselves returning to these papers time and again to clarify our thinking on the economic crisis and its far-reaching consequences.' – James Heintz, Associate Director, Political Economy Research Institute, University of Massachusetts, USA

'Although some important works have emerged that address the impact of the world financial crisis of 2008 on developing countries and on poor people, this volume goes further to ask about the politics that generate transformative change.' – Sakiko Fukuda-Parr, Professor of International Affairs, The New School, USA

In the aftermath of the 2008/2009 financial crisis, the authors of this edited collection examine whether governments in developing countries and the international development community are taking steps to strengthen their commitment to social development, programmes, and policies.
