UN Women is the United Nations entity dedicated to gender equality and the empowerment of women. A global champion for women and girls, UN Women was established to accelerate progress on meeting their needs worldwide.

UN Women supports UN Member States as they set global standards for achieving gender equality, and works with governments and civil society to design laws, policies, programmes and services needed to ensure that the standards are effectively implemented and truly benefit women and girls worldwide. It works globally to make the vision of the Sustainable Development Goals a reality for women and girls and stands behind women's equal participation in all aspects of life, focusing on four strategic priorities: Women lead, participate in and benefit equally from governance systems; Women have income security, decent work and economic autonomy; All women and girls live a life free from all forms of violence; Women and girls contribute to and have greater influence in building sustainable peace and resilience, and benefit equally from the prevention of natural disasters and conflicts and humanitarian action. UN Women also coordinates and promotes the UN system's work in advancing gender equality.

LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS

Radhika Balakrishnan is Faculty Director at the Center for Women's Global Leadership and Professor in Women's and Gender Studies at Rutgers University. She has a Ph.D. in economics from Rutgers University. She is Commissioner for the Commission for Gender Equity for the City of New York and the Co-Chair of the Civil Society Advisory Committee for UNDP, and serves on the Global Advisory Council for the UNFPA. Her most recent co-authored book is Rethinking Economic Policy for Social Justice: The Radical Potential of Human Rights with James Heintz and Diane Elson.

Elissa Braunstein is a Professor and Chair of Economics at Colorado State University, Editor of Feminist Economics and a former Senior Economist for UNCTAD. Her work focuses on the international and macroeconomic aspects of growth and development, with particular emphasis on the interactions between macroeconomic policy and gender equality, as well as the consequences of incorporating care and social reproduction into macroeconomic models.

Diane Elson is known internationally for her research on gender inequality and economic policy. A chapter on her work is included in Fifty Key Thinkers on Development, published by Routledge in 2006. She is Emeritus Professor at Essex University, and a member of the United Nations Committee for Development Policy. In 2016 she was awarded the Leontief Prize for Advancing the Frontiers of Economic Thought. She has published many journal articles, and has co-edited and contributed to numerous books, including Financial Governance from a Feminist Perspective, Economic Policy and Human Rights Obligations, and Rethinking Economic Policy for Social Justice: The Radical Potential of Human Rights.

Marzia Fontana is an Honorary Research Associate at the Institute of Development Studies, University of Sussex. She has extensively researched gender equality, international trade, labour markets, unpaid work and gender-aware economy-wide modelling. She has worked on collaborative projects with various international organizations including the ILO, FAO, UN Women, UNCTAD, UNDP, UNIDO, the World Bank and the IFRI, and has fieldwork experience mostly in South and South-East Asia. Her recent publications include a study on gender equality and inclusive growth in Viet Nam for UN Women, and a paper on gender equality and inclusive industrial development for UNIDO.
