About Oxford Policy Management

Oxford Policy Management is committed to helping low- and middle-income countries achieve growth and reduce poverty and disadvantage through public policy reform. We seek to bring about lasting positive change using analytical and practical policy expertise. Through our global network of offices, we work in partnership with national decision makers to research, design, implement, and evaluate impactful public policy. We work in all areas of social and economic policy and governance, including health, finance, education, climate change, and public sector management. We draw on our local and international sector experts to provide the very best evidence-based support.

About the World Food Programme

Assisting 86.7 million people in around 83 countries each year, the World Food Programme (WFP) is the leading humanitarian organisation saving lives and changing lives, providing assistance in emergencies and working with communities to improve nutrition and build resilience. In 2018, WFP established a Barbados Office for Emergency Preparedness and Response in the Caribbean, in support of the Caribbean Disaster Emergency Management Agency (CDEMA) and Participating States¹ to strengthen systems and technical capacities for a more effective, efficient and predictable response to emergencies. WFP is applying its global mandate and expertise in food security, logistics and emergency telecommunications to address gaps in response capacity, improve regional and national preparedness and to strengthen systems to deliver rapid and appropriate assistance to people facing shocks. These efforts include technical assistance in disaster risk and vulnerability analysis; integrated supply chain management; national preparedness and response planning; strengthening national social protection programmes and systems to respond to shocks; and linking these programmes to climate change adaptation and disaster risk financing.

Acknowledgements

This report was commissioned by WFP and conducted by OPM. It is part of the overall 'Study on Shock-Responsive Social Protection in Latin American and the Caribbean', which has the objective of generating evidence and informing practice for improved emergency preparedness and response, linked to more flexible national social protection systems.²

We want to thank Rodolfo Beazley (OPM's team leader for the assignment), Regis Chapman and Sarah Bailey (WFP Barbados Office for Emergency Preparedness and Response in the Caribbean), and Ana Solórzano (WFP's Regional Bureau for Latin America and the Caribbean) for their guidance, suggestions, and support throughout the development of this publication.

WFP expresses its gratitude to the European Civil Protection and Humanitarian Aid Operations, Global Affairs Canada, the Mexican Agency for International Development Cooperation, the UK Government Department for International Development, and the United States Agency for International Development/Office of U.S. Foreign Disaster Assistance (USAID/OFDA) for the financial support that allowed for the implementation of this literature review.

The opinions expressed in this report are those of the authors and do not necessarily reflect those of WFP, its partners or donors. Responsibility for any inaccuracy rests solely with the authors.
